DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. Claims 1-3, 7-9, 13-15, 19 and 22 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Nakazawa et al. (US Pub. 2002/0027786).

Nakazawa discloses a power controller and method for use with lighting systems including a direct current voltage source (9), a coil of known inductance (T1), a switch means (Tr1) adapted to control application of the source voltage to the coil (T1); means (65) adapted to select a required duty cycle for the switch such that the input power level is substantially constant, and means (50) adapted to control operation of the switch such that this selected duty cycle is effected, wherein,

-a diode (D1) for rectifying an output of the coil, one capacitor (C2), arranged to co-operate with the switch and the coils to form a switchmode DC-DC flyback converter

(Fig. 2, 50), wherein the coils formed a transformer having a primary and a secondary windings

- power controller to control a DC/DC source as a battery source, wherein the mark-space ratio (duty ratio) of the switch (TR1) is modifiable for regulating power constantly and means (R0) to sense the magnitude of a voltage being provided by the voltage source is an input to the microprocessor/controller (50).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior arts are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 4-6, 10-12 and 16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103 (a) as being unpatentable over Nakazawa.

Nakazawa discloses substantially the claim invention as noted above in that the flyback converter is replaced by similar/compatible converter such as boost, buck-boost or buck inverter. Such known type of DC/DC converter is well adapted and being utilized alternately by one skill in the art for a particular design voltage/power.

Any type of known microprocessor for controlling a switch in a duty cycle/ratio manner or an instruction manner would be recognized and expanded by an ordinary skill in the art for better/precise control. Nakazawa also does not limit the power source circuitry for a particular load, therefore any load such as transducer or LED lights that require a DC power supply source within a range limit would be suited for powering. Such these implementations are considered as a routine skill in the art.

Citation of pertinent prior art
